TABLE OF CONTENTS

Are you listening to me? / Martine F. Delfos
90-6665-366-3 BV Uitgeverij SWP

Extensive table of contents

Foreword
Short table of contents
Extensive table of contents

1 Introduction
- 1.1 The dominance of language
- 1.2 Learning capacity and readiness to learn
- 1.3 Reliability and suggestibility
- 1.4 Fantasy and reality
- 1.5 Working and talking while focussing on the perception and need of the child - (need-focussed working)
- 1.6 Framework of a conversation
- 1.7 The structure of this book

2 Development of children aged four to twelve
- 2.1 The child as small adult
- 2.2 The psychosocial development of children aged four to six
- 2.3 The psychosocial development of children aged six to eight
- 2.4 The psychosocial development of children aged eight to ten
- 2.5 The psychosocial development of children aged ten to twelve

3 Conversing
- 3.1 Interpretation
- 3.2 Quality of a conversation
- 3.3 Conditions for communication
  - 3.3.1 Place yourself on the same (eye) level as the child
  - 3.3.2 Look at a child when you're talking to it
  - 3.3.3 Alternate having eye-contact or not with a child while you're talking
  - 3.3.4 Put the child at ease
  - 3.3.5 Listen to what the child is saying
  - 3.3.6 Show the child with examples that what it says has effect
  - 3.3.7 Tell the child that it should tell you what it thinks or wants, because you won't know it if the child does not tell you.
  - 3.3.8 Try to combine playing with talking
  - 3.3.9 Observe that you are breaking off the conversation and will continue it later when you notice that the child withdraws.
  - 3.3.10 When you have had a difficult conversation make sure that the child has a chance to recompose itself again.
- 3.4 Meta communication
  - 3.4.1 Make the purpose of the conversation clear
  - 3.4.2 Let the child know what your intentions are
  - 3.4.3 Let the child know that you need feedback from it
  - 3.4.4 Let the child know that it may remain silent
  - 3.4.5 Try to put a name to what you are feeling and follow your feelings
  - 3.4.6 Invite the child to express his or her opinion about the conversation
  - 3.4.7 Make meta communication a fixed part of the communication
- 3.5 The expertise of the conversation partners
- 3.6 The different interests of the conversation partners
- 3.7 Loyalty
- 3.8 Command of the language and reticence
- 3.9 Transference and counter transference

4 Conversation techniques
4.1 The structure of a conversation
4.1.1 Preparation
4.1.2 The first step: introducing yourself
4.1.3 The introduction of the framework of the conversation
4.1.4 Introductory questions
4.1.5 The starter question
4.1.6 The body
4.1.7 Winding up
4.2 Interview techniques
4.2.1 Open and closed questions
4.2.2 Asking in-depth questions
4.2.3 Asking suggestive questions
4.2.4 Asking multiple questions
4.2.5 Repeat or clarify questions
4.2.6 Repeat or summarise answer
4.2.7 Asking questions by summarising
4.3 Perception
4.4 Body language
4.4.1 Posture
4.4.2 Using the voice
4.5 General attitude

5 Conversing according to age
5.1 Estimating the mental age level of a child
5.2 Conversing with children aged four to six
5.3 Conversing with children aged six to eight
5.4 Conversing with children aged eight to ten
5.5 Conversing with children aged ten to twelve

6 Epilogue

Appendix I Survey of the characteristics of conversing according to age
Appendix II Checklist Jennings
List of surveys
References
Subject and author index